Hello Peace Camp Candidate:

Thank you for your interest in the Youth Peace Camp Initiative. You are about to join a movement to build a better world through peaceful conversations of reconciliation. This program is designed to help you really connect with your own cultural identity and develop confidence to address bullying, discrimination and racism in a good way.

The Red Deer Urban Aboriginal Voices Society is a coalition of individuals and organizations that work together in good ways to improve the lives of urban Indigenous people in Red Deer. We create culturally appropriate initiatives and services that address issues and priorities affecting our community in Red Deer.

Over the next four months you will meet other powerful youth leaders from different backgrounds, develop job readiness skills and participate in Indigenous culture and teachings with Elders and cultural teachers. You will learn to put up a tipi and host a Peace Camp in many different environments.

The next step of your journey is to participate in an intake process where we will answer all your questions about the Peace Camp Initiative. You will learn about the trainings and assignments and explore whether or not this program is for you. If this sounds exciting please contact Tanya to set up a zoom interview. You can text me at 403-597-7048 or email me at uavsfacilitator@gmail.com We must complete this interview before the first training on June 4, 2021. Telling Your Own Story social media workshop.

On the next page you will find the program schedule and expectations for participation.

Respectfully,

Tanya Ward-Schur
UAVS Community Facilitator
Red Deer Urban Aboriginal Voices Society
